

As we look forward to the new year ahead, we're thinking about one key theme that has gotten us through 2020: resilience.

When the pandemic started, we quickly adapted our model and offered our services online to our young people. And we're still doing that today at our programs nationwide.

But we didn't stop there. We created new content and programming that we've been sharing to a wider audience. Adapting in the face of adversity is what makes Safe At Home strong – and we have you to thank for supporting us along the way. We're excited to share some updates, resources, and more with all of you.

Expanding Our Reach

At the beginning of 2021, we'll be announcing new Margaret's Place programs that will expand our reach by more than 7,000 more children and teens in need. Stay tuned for the big announcement early next year!

Streaming Workshops

Thanks to the generous support of the Mother Cabrini Health Foundation, Safe At Home's counselors have prepared a series of new workshops that are connected to the impacts of COVID-19. We've taken these workshops and offered them at our own schools and with local partners. We're also thrilled to share several of them streaming online with all of you! Improving Family Communication During Virtual Learning

For those of us with children in school, the shift to virtual learning came with new challenges and stress. Our Clinical Program Supervisor Rachel has prepared a short video and worksheet that provides tips on how to improve your family's communication while balancing virtual learning. Save The Date: 2021 Gala

Mark your calendars – Safe At Home is preparing to celebrate our 2021 Annual Gala on Thursday, November 11, 2021 in New York City. After careful review of expert projections, we are looking forward to celebrating with you safely in person next fall! Visit our events page for future updates about our other signature events.

Our commitment to supporting youth exposed to violence and abuse is unwavering. That's been doubly true through the COVID-19 crisis. We hope you'll consider supporting our work with a donation today.
